ABSTRACT

This curriculum guide is designed to guide the teaching of a year-long junior- or senior-level high school course that will help students develop skills for managing their work life and family life as well as basic skills, critical thinking, cultural diversity, group interaction, teamwork, and use of technology. It includes a course blueprint, a course outline, information on using the curriculum, and a "Passport to Life" student project that serves as a performance-based assessment model. The course consists of seven units of instruction that cover the following topics: (1) work and family; (2) career development; (3) personal development; (4) relationships; (5) parenting; (6) wellness and nutrition; and (7) resource management. Each unit consists of curriculum pages that include the title of course, title of unit, a competency goal and competency goal number, an objective and objective number, a content outline, instructional activities, behavioral objectives, and resources (state-adopted textbooks and resource books and Future Homemakers of America/Home Economics Related Occupations materials). FOREWORD

This new curriculum guide, Life Management, will prepare students for managing their work life and family life and will help them make informed decisions that will impact the rest of their lives.

The Life Management Curriculum Guide teaches students about important issues they will face immediately following high school, and will help them live independent, satisfying lives. The unique focus is the interrelationship between work and family, and the fact that neither takes place exclusive of the other. Career development, personal development, relationships, parenting, wellness and nutrition, and resource management issues are discussed simultaneously in the context of the workplace and the home.

In addition to addressing life management decisions, the curriculum focuses on basic skills, critical thinking, cultural diversity, group interaction, teamwork, and use of technology. These essential skills provide students with a vehicle for life-long learning. It is our goal that students gain skills that will prepare them to be better individuals, parents, citizens, and workers.

We hope this guide will be helpful to you and your students.

INTRODUCTION

Life Management is a year-long culminating course for levels three and four high school students in Family and Consumer Sciences Education. The following description is from the Programs of Study, Revised 1997 by Workforce Development Education, North Carolina Department of Public Instruction.

Course Number: 7085 Levels: 3 and 4 Maximum Enrollment: 26

Recommended Hours of Instruction: 135-180

This course is designed to empower students to take action for the well-being of themselves and others in the family, workplace, and community. Topics include resource management, personal development, parenting, relationships, career development, and wellness and nutrition. The focus is on what students need to know and be able to do to manage work and family responsibilities within the first five years after high school. Skills in decision making, problem solving, critical thinking, interpersonal relationships, technology, workplace readiness, and communication are reinforced in this course. Work-based learning strategies appropriate for this course are field trips and service learning. Skill development and FHA/HERO leadership activities provide the opportunity to apply instructional competencies and workplace readiness skills to authentic experiences.

USING THE CURRICULUM GUIDE

The focus for the Life Management course is on what students need to know and be able to do to manage future work and family responsibilities. With this premise, we must ask the following questions -- "How do we know when they know?" and "How do we know what they can do?"

The selected curriculum format and assessment model better connects teaching, learning, and assessment. Thus, a more accurate picture of student progress and learning can be documented and measured. The competency goals and objectives are broadly constructed key ideas and concepts that encourage creativity and innovation. The strategies are designed to be directly related to a theme and to be authentic. The activities require students to apply knowledge and perform tasks that represent the real world and to examine the implications achieving the desired outcome. The performance-based assessment model, Passport to Life, provides a framework for connecting the key ideas and concepts. This model provides a consistent and concrete view for knowing what students know and can do. It is critical that the course be taught in the context of work and family and their interrelationship.

CURRICULUM PAGE LAYOUT

Each curriculum page includes the following information.

Course: Title of Course

Unit: Title of Unit

- Competency Goal and Competency Goal Number: Identifies the competency statement and number based on the course blueprint.
- Objective and Objective Number: Identifies the desired student outcome. Each objective makes a complete statement when combined with the stem "The student will be able to ..." All objectives are in italics. The number identifies the objective according to the unit and competency as provided on the course blueprint. Note that "continued" indicates the second page of activities for an objective; the content outline is repeated on these pages.
- Outline: The content outline provides teachers with a base of information to use in covering each object.
- Activities: Activities are designed as student strategies around eight instructional activity themes. See the following Instructional Activities Development Chart for further information.

- Behavior: Each objective addresses a specific level. Learning levels are classified in one or more of the three domains: cognitive, psychomotor, and affective. Symbols used on the curriculum page are identified along with appropriate types of tests and test items. See the following Behaviors Chart for further information.
- Resources: Resources are listed by competency goal on a separate page.
 Each page follows the respective competency goal. Only state-adopted textbooks/resource books and FHA/HERO materials are listed.

Level 3 C3	Apply Explain why Analyze Synthesize Adapt Predict Evaluate	Complex multiple-choice items, essay items using case studies/scenarios, structured interviews using case studies, problem-solving items, product performance items.
Psychomotor (P)	Imitate Try or attempt Demonstrate Improvise Experiment	Performance tests to evaluate either the process, task, procedure, operation performed by the student or product created by the student. The teacher or qualified checklist during the performance test for evaluation.
Affective (A)	Show awareness Show interest in Pay attention to Follow rules or instruction Engage in Volunteer to Show pleasure or satisfaction Participate in actively Show preference for Initiate and carry out Assume responsibility	Evaluation of behavior may be reflected through student actions over an extended period of time with before and after measures; complete a rating scale or projective device; respond to a checklist; teacher's recorded observations, oral expression by the student (personal opinion, group interaction); written responses by student (diary lag, projective device, completion of rating scale).

Instructional Activities Development Chart Life Management Curriculum Guide

In the Life Management Curriculum Guide, each instructional objective will have 5 or more suggested activities to help students achieve the intended outcome of the objective. These activities are written to achieve the "Instructional Activity Theme," as identified on the following chart.

WHAT ARE SCANS?

SCANS stands for The Secretary's Commission on Achieving Necessary Skills and was initiated by the US Department of Labor. The SCANS competencies, or Workplace Know-How, define skills students need to be effective in today's workplace.

SCANS includes a three-part foundation of skills:

- Basic Skills reading, writing, arithmetic and mathematics, speaking, and listening
- Thinking Skills thinking creatively, making decisions, solving problems, seeing things in the mind's eye, knowing how to learn, and reasoning
- Personal Qualities individual responsibility, self-esteem, sociability, selfmanagement, and integrity

And five competencies:

- Resources allocating time, money, materials, space, and staff
- Interpersonal Skills working on teams, teaching others, serving customers, leading, negotiating, and working with people from culturally diverse backgrounds
- Information acquiring and evaluating data, organizing and maintaining files, interpreting and communicating, and using computers to process information
- Systems understanding social, organization, and technological systems, monitoring and correcting performance, and designing or improving systems
- Technology selecting equipment and tools, applying technology to specific tasks, and maintaining and troubleshooting technologies

¹² 23

WHAT IS NCESAC?

The North Carolina Education Standards and Accountability Commission was created by the General Assembly in July 1993 to ensure that "all graduates of North Carolina public schools will have mastered the skills to become productive members of the work force and succeed in life." In the Third Annual Report to the State Board of Education, the NCESAC made twelve recommendations to move North Carolina Public Schools toward more rigorous and relevant standards. Recommendation two lists the following six competency areas as those in which graduates must demonstrate proficiency.

- Communication
- Using numbers and data
- Problem solving
- Processing information
- Teamwork
- Using technology

HOW CAN SCANS AND NCESAC COMPETENCIES BE INTEGRATED INTO FAMILY AND CONSUMER SCIENCES CURRICULUM?

The integration of SCANS and NCESAC competencies focuses on how one teaches as opposed to what one teaches. The role of the teacher needs to be examined and shifted from taskmaster to facilitator. To be simply an imparter of knowledge is a role teachers cannot afford to maintain, because the future for students may prove that knowledge to be obsolete and inapplicable. Students must be taught how to learn and continue to be learners throughout their lifetimes.

A few simple changes in one's approach to the role of teaching can make a tremendous difference in bringing classrooms into the 21st century. Family and Consumer Sciences teachers already have an advantage because the curriculum is life skills. Relevancy is built into the curriculum. To integrate SCANS and NCESAC competencies into the Family and Consumer Sciences curriculum, teachers must:

• Make SCANS and NCESAC competencies explicit.

Keep SCANS and NCESAC competencies visible in the classroom through the use of posters or signs. Teach students what they are and why they are important. Identify competencies and skills being practiced in class.

Teach in context.

Make activities applicable to real-life situations. Identify the connection between what students are doing in class and how they can use it in real life. Make activities authentic.

Focus on problem solving versus mastery of information.

Start lessons with a question to be answered or a problem to be solved. Engage students in deciding how to approach the question or problem. The role of the teacher then becomes one of facilitator instead of taskmaster or imparter of knowledge. Teamwork, decision making, problem solving, and critical thinking become vital components in the learning process.

Develop active learners.

Students must become more responsible for their own learning. To accomplish this goal, teachers can offer more opportunities for students to decide how they will learn. Even though the content is prescribed in the curriculum, students can make decisions about the activities they wish to use to learn the content. Students must be involved in a continual process of self-assessment. Supplemental assessment tools that can be used include portfolios, rubrics, authentic task assessment, student checklists, journals, and other forms of self-assessment. Refer to the following two documents: (1) Lowe, Vicki and Lou Howell, "How Do We Know They Know?" Alternative Assessments in Home Economics. HEEA/Home Economics Association, Box 603, Gainesville, VA 22065, 1994, and (2) Alternative Assessment: A Family and Consumer Sciences Teacher's Tool Kit. Vocational Instructional Materials Laboratory, Ohio State University, 1900 Kenny Road, Columbus, Ohio 43210, 1996.

Use SCANS and NCESAC competencies in combination.

Generally, an activity that uses a combination of SCANS and NCESAC competencies will require higher order thinking skills, more decision making and problem solving, and more complex organizing systems.

"Passport to Life" The Culminating Life Management Project

A Suggested Performance Based Assessment Model

The "Passport to Life" project consists of four components - a research paper, a project or product, a presentation, and a portfolio. The "Passport to Life" project is an integral part of the Life Management course work.

The first component includes the preparation of a research paper by every student. Students are to select a topic that has application and implications for managing work and family and lends itself to performing a skill or producing a product. Guidelines for selecting the topic should be established by the teacher. The paper uses the acquisition of knowledge through researching, writing, interviewing, and synthesizing in conjunction with applying real work skills of time management, organization, self-discipline, persistence, and problem solving. The recommended length of the paper should be six to ten typed, double-spaced pages, with a minimum of five primary and secondary sources. An interview must be one of the primary sources.

The second component includes the preparation of a project/product that is an appropriate and logical extension of the research paper. It demonstrates the application of acquired knowledge through a reflective, physical, and/or intellectual stretch. The product or project may incorporate the experiential, performance, or experimental real-world skills of patience, responsibility, enthusiasm, time management, problem solving, practice, and independence. A minimum of fifteen hours of outside class work is recommended.

The third component includes a presentation before a panel of judges, with a recommended five to seven minute formal speech on the research paper, project or product, and personal growth. A question and answer period should follow the presentation. The panel should be composed of educators and community members with knowledge or background relevant to the project or product area. The presentation should culminate the Life Management course work.

The fourth component includes a portfolio, which consists of two parts. Part one includes evidence of the student's efforts, progress, and achievement over the entire time span of the course. This part of the portfolio should contain representative samples of the work, correlated to course objectives, and include such items as homework tasks, quizzes and tests, logs, written work, survey results, self-assessment tools, independent and cooperative projects, video and audio tapes of performance, observation checklists, rough drafts of assignments, and completed individual and group products. Part two includes the project or product components, with a resume, that is to be provided for panel perusal. This tool provides the judges and the student with a roadmap of the journey through the Life Management course and a summary of the growth that was achieved.

Steps in Facilitating the "Passport to Life" Project

- 1. Provide student orientation
- 2. Establish schedule and deadlines
- 3. Establish criteria for each component
- 4. Approve topics
- 5. Guide students in selecting a mentor
- 6. Provide instruction on research and information retrieval
- 7. Approve description of project/product
- 8. Provide instruction on public speaking
- 9. Schedule presentations
- 10. Display projects/products
- 11. Display project portfolios
- 12. Arrange for judging of presentations
- 13. Request evaluation of project from students, judges, community members, and mentors

Note: Frequent monitoring of progress and accomplishments should be checked and documented.

Topic Selection Guidelines

- 1. The topic should be of interest to the student, but not a topic in which the student is already an expert.
- 2. The topic should be broad enough to allow the student access to sufficient information, yet specific enough to make the research scope reasonable.
- 3. The topic may require cumulative knowledge across grade levels and content. An integrated topic is encouraged.
- 4. The topic should be challenging and require both an academic and creative s-t-r-e-t-c-h for the student.
- 5. Students should avoid choosing topics that might involve expenses they are unable to meet.
- 6. Students should avoid choosing topics that might endanger themselves or others.
- 7. Students should use good judgment in selecting topics that are appropriate for presentation to the judges and the general public.
- 8. The topic should have application and implications for life management.
- 9. The topic should lend itself to relevant community service.
- 10. The topic should be future focused and be relevant to the student's first five years after high school.
- 11. The topic should be appropriate for use as part of a state or national FHA/HERO project or competitive event.

Portfolio Part Two Contents

Part two of the portfolio is an introduction to the presentation and product/project that will be delivered to a panel of judges. The portfolio content, monitoring process, and deadlines should be outlined by the teacher during the initial stages of the "Passport for Life" project. Listed below are suggested contents.

- 1. Current resume
- 2. Project proposal
- 3. Project approval
- 4. Mentor log
- 5. Project log
- 6. Research paper
- 7. Journal entries
- 8. Description of the project/product
- 9. Written acknowledgment to those who helped in the student's learning journey, such as a thank-you note
- 10. Photographs that document the student's work over the span of the project
- 11. Appropriate items beyond those required that the student deems important to illustrate his/her progress

"Passport to Life" Project Proposal

1.	Briefly describe the topic of your research.
2.	Why did you choose this topic?
3.	Have you had any previous experience(s) related to this topic? If so, what were they?
4.	What do you hope to gain from your research investigation?
5.	Describe the community service activities that will be a part of this project.
6.	How do you plan to dovetail your project with FHA/HERO?
7.	How do you plan to demonstrate your topic through a project/product?
